The quartet residency at Utah State University has had a profound impact on the String Program and Music Department as a whole. The remarkable growth in the String Program over the past few years is a testament to the comprehensive program that Fry Street Quartet and Yi Ching Fedkenheuer continue to develop for the students. Over the course of the degree program, students receive a tremendous amount of individual attention and interaction with all members of the string faculty, as well as an impressive number of visiting guest artists who come to give master classes and/or lectures.

The mission of the String Program is to build great college performing ensembles, comprised of great individual musicians who can garner at USU the skills and thought processes necessary to pursue graduate degrees and to lead their generation in the fields of Music Performance and Music Education. An additional purpose is to serve the greater USU and Cache Valley communities by providing a rich level of artistic activity that can be accessed by the public in many ways. Great music educators are first great musicians, or, teaching music is as much about music as it is about teaching.
